Mr. Compton stated that he was rather surprised at the way in which the specifications were not carried out. Engineer English then made a statement. Mr. English said the stone was of the proper kind and was as near the size specified as he could possibly get it. He said that he could possibly get it. He said the sand was used on the work instead gravel, because of a request made by t gravel, because of a request made by the council to keep the expense down, after they learned it would make a difference of $700. From the New Orleans Picayune.

A few days ago Mr. Harry H. Hodgson one of the oldest cyclers in the city and the founder of the local division of the League of American Wheelmen, returned with his wife from quite an extended tour of Europe.

Mr. Hodgson has possibly done more for the bicycle riders of this city than any other person. It has been his one hope to secure for the riders some system of road legislation which would give to the public good reads throughout Louisiana. Having made the question a close study he realized the importance of the work, and at convention with the object of placing on a convention with the object of placing on a working basis a plan for improving the miserable country roads of the state.

While in Europe Mr. Hodgson paid particular attention to the cycling of that country, and the roads which the cyclers had at their command. The magnificence of these thoroughfares was, indeed, striking. They showed even more clearly the utter lack of pathways in the south, and the carelessness exhibited in the construction of the few good roads of which the state can boast.

Speaking of cycling in Europe and the bicycles used, especially in France, Mr. Hodgson remarked that the foreign wheel was of a much heavier weight than the Hodgson remarked that the foreign wheel was of a much heavier weight than the American machine, and still it was not more durable. The American wheel has gained much prominence in France, and especially in Faris, where it is considered the best. The French machine weighs from thirty-two to thirty-five pounds; the American wheels weigh about twenty-five to thirty bounds.

While in Parls Mr. Hodgson witnessed while in Paris Mr. Hodgson witnessed the races between Banker of Pittsburg and the Belgian champion. The Belgian rider had defeated all the fast tiders of Europe, but when he met the American he was simply played with. Banker allowed his rival to lead until the stretch near the faith, when he went by him with comparafinish, when he went by him with comparafinish, when he went by him with compara-tive ease. There were hundreds of Amer-icans at the race, and the money won amounted to thousands. Every bet was taken, and even odds were given. The Americans showed their true American spirit, and played on their country representative in every manner possible

Craze for Cycles.

The cafes and restaurants all over Europe cater to the wheelmen. In the early evening the waiters place on the sidewalk bicycle stands, and riders can have their machines locked up, and when they are ready to depart they present a check and their wheel is released.

It is a common sight to see from ten to twenty wheels at one time in front of cafes and restaurants of the cities of Europe. The craze for cycles has swept over the world, and the number of riders is wonderful. In Europe this growth is not so extraordinary, for the reason that the country roads are so magnificent. Among the most famous of these roads, and possibly the most magnificent piece of engineering in the world, is the driveway from Nice to Monte Carlo. It is the Corniche road, made in the side of the mountain. The surface in the side of the mountain. The surface is of the hardest broken granite, and is is of the hardest broken granite, and is kept in such constant repair that it is actually as smooth as a billiard table. The foundation was so properly laid, and the road itself so well drained, that five minutes after a rain it is dry. There are gutters on the roadside, and these gutters are drained at intervals to deep ditches, where the water is held until carried off again and distributed among streams.

In France every department cares for the roads, which are kept in the most perfect repair. Should one department have a surplus, after the roads in that section have been properly attended to, that money, instead of lying idle, is expended in laying been properly attended to, that money, instead of lying idle, is expended in laying out another road, and when more money can be secured this new road is completed and made as beautiful as the old ones. Immediately upon the laying out of a road trees are planted, and within a few years there is an archway to shade the riders in the summer months, and the big trees break the wind of the winter.

The roads of Italy, as of all Europe, are very fine, but these are sadly in need of repair. The country, however, is bankrupt, and can hardly make the necessary improvements, yet the roads were so well and properly constructed originally that they have stood the ravages of time. In many instances there are good roads which aave instances there are good roads which have not received a bit of improvement in twenty streets of New Orleans. Of course, these public driveways are not cut to pieces by heavy wagons and floats like the streets of the American city. One of the most striking examples of a road and the manner in which a road should be built is the Applian Way which leads from the control of the Appian Way, which leads from the city of Rome. Built 2,000 years ago by the Caesars, it is even now considered one of the best roads in the world. Within the past fifteen years there has not been one cent expended upon the driveway, and, from general appearances, it can stand on m general appearances, it can stand an

The one secret for the preservation of the streets of Paris is proper legislation. Vehicles, under the laws, are required to carry tires according to the weight to be carried on the wagon. Carriages and pleasure vehicles are allowed a certain width for their tires, but the heavy floats and wine wagons must have a much wider tire. In this manner the extreme heavy loads are distributed over a much larger space than the weight of a cotton float and its narrow-tired wheels. Then, too, the wagons are not allowed to progression, the wagons are not allowed to progression. weight of a cotton float and its narrow-tired wheels. Then, too, the wagons are not allowed to pass over certain streets, which are reserved for the pleasure vehicles, like the Champs Elysees, where heavy traffic is forbidden, and only light vehicles are allowed, and many of these have rubber bands over their tires and pneumatic tires to their light wheels.

In Germany the same grand roads exist. There are very few clubs in that country.

In Germany the same grand roads exist. There are very few clubs in that country. The bicycle riders are great tourists, however, and can be found over all parts of Europe. In Germany there exists the Radfahrer Verein, an organization much after the fashion of the League of American Wheelmen. It has about 45,000 members. The greatest feeling of friendship exists among all wheelmen of different countries. To snow the fraternity of the wheel all over To snow the fraternity of the wheel all ove the world, Mr. Hodgson cited an incident which occurred in Genoa, Italy. He was about to catch a train, and at the depot he was approached by an Italian cyclist. He had recognized the League of American Wheelmen badge pinned on the lapel of Mr.

Wheelmen badge pinned on the lapel of Mr. Hodgson's coat, and, seeing the American, came forward with great exhibition of friendship, shaking his hand and saying something in Italian about America.

As the train pulled out the Italian could be seen standing on the platform waving his hand. In Brussels the cycling fever was found to be universal. Thousands were riding wheels, and Antwerp is now a cycling center. The Acenstrasse, which borders center. The Aenstrasse, which borders Lake Lucerne, is another of the famous roads of Italy, and is visited by almost every tourist who goes that far south.

Improved Roads. The principle which seems to be followed in the building of roads is, first, a proper foundation, made hard by drainage. Then there is placed a layer of broken stone, and the top surface is usually made of small stones, which are watered and rolled by immense stone rollers, until the surface is as solid as a rock and smooth as possible. as solid as a rock and smooth as possible. The improvement in the machines for making roads has advanced and is still advancing. The roads of all Europe are so extremely good and are so well built that there is not a country which a rider cannot tour in its entirety, no matter how wet or how dry and warm the weather may be. The engineers of Europe consider asphaltum the best material for building streets, and this is used very extensively both in David and the weather warm to be the constant of the cons um the best material for building streets, and this is used very extensively both in Paris and London. Wood pavements have also been very extensively used, but several prominent physicians hold that wood pavements catch and hold the germs of disease, and that they should be done away with

The cycling among the women has adane cycling among the women has advanced as much as among the men. In Paris the costumes worn by the lady riders consist of everything from bloomers to racing tights, the bloomers, of course, being ng tights, the bloomers, of course, being the most popular. The white sweaters are often worn. Among other interesting thing about cyclers, Mr. Hodgson told of a strange costume which a lady in France had made. The costume was neatly made for bloomers, and in the country, for the par excellence."

> In concluding, Mr. Hodgson remarked that the road is that physical sign or symbol by which you may imderstand any age or people. If they have no roads they are savages, for the road is the creation of men, and the type of civilized society. No comparison could be drawn between the streets and roads of Louisiana and those of Europe; but with proper attention and Europe: but with proper attention and proper engineering, which was not prompt ed by a desire to make personal gain, the roads of Louisiana could be made equal to those in any other state in the Union.

Mr. Spofford's Statement as to His Recent Deposit Into the Treasury. Librarian Spofford, in view of various conflicting statements regarding the sum of $22,400 paid by him into the treasury last week, was asked what the amount really represented. He replied that it was approximately the amount due the treasonce attempted to secure the calling of a vry on balance of copyright and salary ac counts, as he found it. An unfavorable and wholly wrong construction, he said, had been placed upon it as representing a large deficit, whereas it was actually a balance between two accounts—a salary account due the librarian for several months' disbursements and an account due the government for several months' copyright fees. These accounts had remained unsettled, although constant payments had been made by him to the number of ten settled, although constant payments had been made by him to the number of ten or twelve during 1894 and 1895, of copyright receipts, amounting to over $55,000, besides the $22,400 now deposited. ### MAHON'S RIDE.

A Law Suit of War Times That Never

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Before I close this desultory account of horses impressed, captured or stolen, I must tell a horse story of Lee's invasion of 1863 that ought to be historic, but that I believe has never appeared in print. Congressman Mahon, who will probably prove the only sincere advocate of the "border claims" in the next Congress, is the hero of this tale. Mahon always had an eye to a good horse, and so it is not surprising that an animal belonging to an officer in Jenkins' cavalry brigade should have taken his particular fancy. As the borough of Chambersburg was then in possession of the enemy, most other men would have been content to admire, without a thought of ownership, notwithstanding the horse was riderless for the moment and without an immediate attendant. With Mahon to an immediate attendant. With Mahon to admire was to act, and so he sprang into the saddle and rode away. He was pursued, but escaped, and still had possession of the horse after the last "reb" had gone back to "Dixle." But somehow the town fathers of dear old Chambersburg imagined that the borough owned that horse, and, as attorney for the town, I was instructed to sue Mahon for the value of the animal. I accordingly brought an action on the case, and filed my "narratio," while Mahon made answer by a most formidable array of counsel. All this happened in October, 1863, but the case has never been tried. It ought to be Mahon will consent to waive all formalities, or never been tried. It ought to be. Manon will consent to waive all formalities, or rather informalities, so that we can get the case before Judge Stewart and a jury. I believe I will go back and try it. What a Rip Van Winkle proceeding it would be! I don't suppose I could win, for I never believed the old town had any more claim. to that horse than I have to the moon, but if the defense was willing and the court gave us plenty of scope we would carry out a new chapter in history, and Mahon's ride would become as famous as Sheridan's.

A North Carolina Ruling.

From the San Francisco Argonaut. In North Carolina the judges of the superior courts "rotate," i. e., ride each circuit of the whole state in regular succession. When Judge Shipp of one of the mountain courts, in regular rotation came to ride a circuit on the sea coast, he was much pleased with clams, which were new to him. He had a clam supper, with the result that he had a most violent illness, and could not hold court for two or thre days. When able to sit on the bench, the first case tried was an affray in which one man used a pistol and the other knocked him down with a clam (in the shell). Manly, appearing for the state, introduced was a deadly weapon. "Stop there, Manly," said the judge, earnestly; "the court will hear evidence whether or not a pistol is a deadly weapon, but the court knows without further evidence that a clam is."

Fine Old Cider.

From the Boston Commercial Bulletin.
"Haow d'ye like that cider?" asked a close old farmer of a poor fellow that he had given a glass instead of a tip for a job.
"Pretty good; but it's a pity you didn't have another apple."
"Another apple! Why?"
"Because you could have made another barrel of it, you know." FOR RESULTS OF EXCESSES THE OFFICIAL PROGRAM.

Dedicatory Services of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National An order outlining the official program for the dedicatory services of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park was issued yesterday by Secretary Lamont. It is as follows: War Department, August 26, 1895. Pursuant to the act of Congress approved December 15, 1894, the national dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park will take place on the 19th and 20th of September proximo.

The veterans, those who have been invited, and the public will assemble at Snodgrass Hill, on the battlefield of Chickamauga at noon, September 19. Orations will be delivered by Gen. John M. Palmer of Illinois and General John B. Gordon of

The exercises on the 20th will begin at noon in the city of Chattanooga. Orations will be delivered by General William B. Bate of Tennessee and General Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio.

The evenings of both days will be de voted to meetings of the veterans of the armies participating in the two battles.
